

A Highland Wooing

BY IDA DE THAËL

"SAY NO MORE," HE INTERRUPTED. "DOST THOU TRULY LOVE ME?"

WE must have our revenge! I will avenge him!"

Iona laid a particular stress on the pronoun, and, as she spoke to herself, she flung up her head with a resolute gesture. She fully shared her father's feeling. Indeed, there was not a man or woman belonging to the clan of the MacShanly who would not have willingly risked his or her life in order to avenge their young leader's death.

Brave and open-hearted, Malcolm, the only son and heir of the mighty laird of MacShanly, had not hesitated to accept the invitation of his neighbor, the laird of Doneldhu, to come to his castle and discuss matters relative to some boundary land.

True, Angus Doneldhu had an evil reputation. His cruelty and violence had roused a feeling of hate in many a heart. Still, the trusting young man did not believe him capable of a base treachery. Malcolm did not live to find out that he had been mistaken. A blow struck from behind had brought that young life to an end.

Angus knew that his victim's father, that all his clan, would rise in arms to avenge his death, but he only laughed contemptuously. Who could storm his stronghold? It was impregnable, not only because man had built high, heavy walls, but also because Nature had surrounded the high rock on which it was built by an impregnable natural barrier to land, and when the drawbridge was raised Angus Doneldhu could well afford to laugh at the threats of his enemies.

Iona knew well the difficulties that such an enterprise presented, but her blood was up, and no difficulties daunted her. Yet she had felt that morning sorely perplexed and dismayed when her father had unfolded his plan to her, for to strengthen his forces he had called a young and powerful neighbor, Robert of Ronuk, and asked his help. The day when Robert would bring to him the token of the death of his cowardly foe, that day Robert would become the husband of Iona, his beautiful daughter, heiress of his splendid domain.

"I can't—I can't marry him!" the girl repeated vehemently. "Oh, it is cruel of my father! He knows I cannot ever become a loving wife to Robert, that I have already given my heart to Duncan, and because he is poor he refuses to listen to his suit. And now what shall I do if Robert kills Angus and comes to claim my hand? Can I refuse to pay this debt of gratitude? No, I must avenge my father and thus be released from the promise that my father has made."

It was sunset when Iona slipped out of her father's castle and walked quickly away. The road was long to the trusting place, the wood behind her hill where she frequently met Duncan, brave and true, the young Master of Glenry had won the perfect love of his feet, but he was very poor, and when he had asked the laird of MacShanly for his daughter's hand he had met with a cruel refusal.

However, the girl had promised to be true to him, and as often as they dared they met in the shadow of the pine trees by the rushing burn.

Duncan was already there, and his heart beat more strongly as he saw outlined against the blue sky the slim figure of his betrothed bride. She walked rapidly, with the graceful, swinging stride of the mountaineer. The sun caught here and there the narrow yellow stripes of her dark tartan and shone on the buckle that gathered her kilt.

But he saw only the dark flashing eyes and red lips that parted with a smile when she caught sight of him. When they were standing side by side she eagerly told him her sad tale—how her father had promised her to another.

"Say no more," he interrupted. "Dost thou truly love me?"

"Oh, Duncan, thou knowest it surely." And Iona raised her beautiful eyes and gazed at him so lovingly that he bent and softly kissed the white, pure forehead.

"Then, dearest, have no fear. Do you think that if thy brother's murderer should fall by my hand thy father should listen to me more kindly?"

"He surely would."

"Then I must succeed. I must do it."

"But, think, Duncan," she nervously interrupted. "Think of all the men that Robert Ronuk can muster. His clan is so powerful. Though powerful as he may be, he will not succeed in obtaining my love."

"And I, too, will try to help thee. I am ready for anything."

"If then art thus resolved nothing can part us. Our love will triumph over all obstacles," Duncan passionately replied.

Night was coming. The mountains were still bathed in a golden light and the hard rocks threw back the bright rays. The soft purple carpet of heather glistered, but the sun no longer shone on the valley. Then it disappeared behind the hills and all grew dark.

It was only then that Iona and Duncan regretfully parted. He soon disappeared in the wood and she removed her steps toward her father's home.

The moon had risen, and she was able to see some way off. Suddenly she noticed a lone figure almost crouching on the ground. The girl stopped and gazed anxiously. Who could it be? Iona was not easily frightened and she softly walked forward. Then she recognized an old gypsy woman, well known in that neighborhood. Skilled in mysterious lore, she was reputed to be a witch and regarded with a mixture of hate and awe. Once her life had been threatened, and it was only through Iona's intercession that she had escaped unhurt. Like all gypsies, she never forgot either a good deed or an insult. She became devoted to the daughter of MacShanly and from her the girl learned many useful remedies.

She was gathering herbs when Iona drew near, and gently touched her on the shoulder.

"What are you doing, granny?" she asked. "Are you concocting some new remedies?"

The old woman started, but when she recognized who it was who spoke to her her stern features slightly relaxed.

"Yes, lady. I am gathering herbs." She laughed shortly, then added: "When men are powerful and in good health the poor gypsy woman is insulted and humiliated, but when diseases come they call her back and are too glad to obtain her help."

"And who is ill and needing thy skill?" the girl asked.

"There are several sick men in the castle of Doneldhu. I am to go there to-morrow night and tend them."

"Men of the clan of Doneldhu?" she breathlessly repeated, "and you will be admitted in the castle?"

She scarcely listened to the gypsy's affirmative reply. She was quivering with excitement. The idea that had flashed through her mind was a wild one, the danger was great, but was she not resolved to run any risk rather than become the wife of Robert—of the man whose honor and gratitude would force her to marry if he succeeded in avenging her brother's death?

And in her brave, resolute heart the thought took root and grew strong as the dark pines that sprang up on the mountains.

Day after day the situation remained unchanged, and the men intrenched in the rocky fastnesses of Doneldhu fretted and fumed.

They were closely surrounded by the soldiers of Ronuk, who knew how hopeless an assault was, but that the provisions of the besieged must some day fail them. Irged by hunger and impatience, they would make some desperate attempt to break through the circle of iron that bound them, and there would come the chance of the brave but wily and cunning laird of Ronuk.

The besieged knew that, and were accordingly angry and ill-tempered. Some men were gathered in the castle's courtyard, and, weary of the enforced idleness, had begun to discuss the situation.

"I wonder what our lord means to do. As a rule he quickly makes up his mind, but now he lets the days go by and does not attempt anything."

"Is he not ill?" queried another. "One hardly ever sees him. He remains alone, brooding in his rooms."

"He is certainly very much altered." The man hesitated, then sank his voice to a whisper. "The blood he has shed lies heavy on his soul. He did not kill Malcolm MacShanly in fair fight, but in the banquet hall stabbed him in the back. It is said that his ghost returns every night to curse Doneldhu, and when the shadows have fallen he does not dare to rest anywhere, but wanders alone all over the castle—hark, what is this?"

A pibroch rang out from beyond the rushing burn, and when the pipes had ceased playing a wild slogan was heard.

"These are new foes," said an old man. "It is not the war cry of Ronuk, it is that of the clan of Glenry, the clan so powerful in past days and that has almost ceased to exist."

"It was considered as destroyed, now they have no land and no power. Their chief is a young and recklessly brave man. True, he has few followers, but he may nevertheless prove a tough foe."

No one replied to those words, and they all remained silent as the shades of night began to fall.

"There goes the witch," said a man as an old bent figure noiselessly crossed the courtyard, then was swallowed up in the darkness. "Horrid thing! I wish I could wring her old neck!"

"Her herbs and mixtures can cure many diseases. She is useful."

"David has not forgiven her for the disagreeable surprise she gave him," laughed one of his companions.

"What happened?"

"He had been talking the witch about her hunched-up figure and saying that probably the beauty of the face made up for it, but that she kept it so jealously concealed that it was difficult to judge. So saying, he tried to lift her heavy shawl. What do you think she did? With a wild gesture she drew out her knife and almost plunged it in his breast. He said that he could see her eyes glittering like those of the Evil One himself."

"I don't believe that she is a creature of flesh and blood," David solemnly rejoined. "So it is no use to fight her with ordinary weapons."

In the meanwhile the subject of their conversation had crept away.

She slipped out of the castle by a small door and found herself on the rocks bounded on all sides by the rushing torrent.

Then her figure suddenly straightened and she bounded lightly from rock to rock as far as she dared to venture.

Stopping, she uttered a plaintive cry similar to that of the deer calling his mate in the winter bound woods.

Another cry was heard, this time coming from the bank. Then a figure emerged, hardly perceptible, however, in the night.

"Iona, my darling."

The voice rose softly above the rush of the water, and the girl thrilled as she heard it, and forgot the danger.

"Duncan!" she called back; then suddenly her joy was darkened by fear, and she went on anxiously:—"Are you really ready? Is there no danger that the rope should break?"

"No, dearest. Going down these rocks will be an easy matter. To climb again to the heights where you stand will be more difficult, but you will warn and direct me from above."

"Yes, I will. But take care; take care, for my sake."

She had no time to add more. He had already begun to descend a few minutes after he was at the foot of the rocks. Suddenly Iona saw a light gleaming in the castle. She listened and heard heavy foot-steps. Should she be seen there she would be immediately suspected.

"Stay there; do not move," she said in a low voice to Duncan. "Some one is coming, but I will return."

Hastily turning around Iona re-entered the castle, shut the door, then fled up the narrow staircase of the turret. She stopped only at the summit and crouched down in the darkest corner.

She anxiously wondered who it might be, for very seldom came any one in that part of the castle. A faint light glimmered, then a man began to ascend the winding staircase. He held a torch in his hand and she could well distinguish his features.

The blood seemed to freeze in her veins as she recognized the laird of Doneldhu, her brother's murderer.

Holding her breath, she shrank still further back against the wall. Her eyes closed, she hid the eye and the night was dark. Doneldhu drew near, yet saw her not. His brow was gloomy, his stern features even more forbidding than usual.

But the bloodhound that followed at his heels scented the presence of a stranger, and, springing forward, snarled angrily.

"Who is there?" cried Doneldhu, starting.

It was impossible to escape discovery. Boldly Iona stepped forward.

"Who art thou?" he asked, half in amazement, half in fear. Then the girl allowed the heavy shawl that concealed her features to drop and, drawing herself to her full height, gazed fearlessly in his eye.

"Say not that thou dost not recognize me. Thy cheek has paled. Thou hast heard the cry of thy conscience, the cry of the blood which thou hast shed. I have come to avenge my brother's death."

All blood had now left Doneldhu's face, and he covered before her. The man who had never feared a danger trembled as his eyes met those dark flashing eyes so similar to those of his victim.

Was it not the dead who had arisen to curse him? Was not that voice that vibrated above the wall of the wind the voice of Fate itself? Reckless, bending forward so near that he could feel her breath on his face, Iona spoke again.

"And I have come to kill thee! Thy last hour has struck, murderer!"

With a quick gesture she put her hand on her knife, then started in dismay. The sheath was empty and she was weaponless!

Her gesture broke the spell that seemed to bind Doneldhu and, springing forward, he lifted his hand, using the torch he held as a weapon.

The girl felt the flame on her, but with desperate energy she caught hold of the torch and wrenched it out of his hand.

Then she leaned out of the embrasure and allowed the full glare of the light to fall on Doneldhu.

"Kill him, Duncan!" she called out. "Kill him! Kill him!"

"What art thou doing?" Doneldhu cried in amazement, rushing to the embrasure. "Curse thee! Be silent! Or—"

He did not finish his sentence. One instant later he staggered and, without a cry, fell.

Then the girl saw an arrow buried in his breast and one blood stain on his vest.

Still she stared on, hardly believing her own eyes—that the mighty laird, so feared and powerful, indeed lay dead before her.

But from below she heard Duncan's voice:—"I have avenged thy brother, and thou shalt be mine, Iona. Come, come to me!"

At the sound of his voice the girl recovered a little of her presence of mind. She realized that should any of Doneldhu's men find her she was lost. She must instantly escape, and, taking with her some token of their foe's death, return to her father.

Bending over the lifeless body, she seized the gory shirt and stripped a large piece out of it.

She shuddered as her hand touched the warm moisture, but, conquering her disgust, thrust it under her shawl and quickly ran down.

HE DID NOT FINISH HIS SENTENCE

She was soon standing on the rocks, the torrent beat at her feet, she saw the foam glimmer, then made out the dark silhouette of Duncan.

But then she was obliged to halt. How would she be able to let herself down to the ledge upon which he stood? She dared not return to the inhabited part of the castle to fetch some ropes.

As she was hesitating what to do Duncan quickly took off his shawl and stretched it open.

"Jump in!" he cried.

In spite of her bravery, Iona wavered. The dark waters dashed with an angry roar on the rocks; she saw the streaks of white foam, and, fascinated, jumped not.

"Quick, every minute lost is precious!" urged Duncan. "Have no fear; I will save thee!"

Then the girl, with an effort, refused to think of the danger, and, her eyes fixed on Duncan, jumped.

She felt herself caught in his arms and knew that she was safe.

One long kiss, then she drew herself away.

"We must hasten to leave this place. The men of Doneldhu may soon learn their lord's death."

"We will go to thy father, and now that I have avenged thy brother I will claim thee as my promised bride."

"Take this," whispered Iona, and with a shudder she gave him the blood-stained shirt of Doneldhu. "When my father sees this he will refuse thee nothing."

The night was dark and a strong wind was blowing. Unperceived they hurried off, and soon had left behind them the glimmering fires of Ronuk's camp.

They soon left the glen, but when they had reached the loch's side the weather changed completely.

The wind dropped, and from the water arose a heavy mist. They were soon surrounded by the fog and had to grope forward with uncertain steps.

They did not dare to stop, for they wished to be already far when the sun rose, but they often lost their way. Where was the loch? Where were the hills? Nothing was visible.

At last they found themselves stopped by a torrent. "Wait here a minute," said Duncan. "I will go and see whether I can't find a place where we can ford it."

In spite of her strength Iona was beginning to feel very tired, and she wearily sat down.

Soon she started up, thinking she heard Duncan calling her, and took some few steps forward. Suddenly she missed the ground, felt there was an abyss yawning in front of her, lost her balance and fell forward.

Down she went, crashing through branches, wildly clutching at everything her hand touched, yet unable to stop herself, then with a dull thud fell at the bottom.

For a while she lay dizzy, almost unconscious. At last, slowly she began to realize what had happened. She had been standing on the high, overhanging banks of the loch, when she suddenly slipped. As she thought of Duncan, she loudly called out his name, then shuddered as she heard the echo repeat it.

No, some one might be lurking near; she must not attract notice. But, oh! what if she had lost Duncan? With sudden fear she sprang to her feet and attempted to scramble up. But an impassable wall seemed to be standing before her; she could not see, but only feel, and the obstacle seemed insuperable.

"I must try at another place," she thought, and hurried on.

All at once she felt her feet sink in the soft slime and the cold water on them. She hastily drew back and ran in the other direction. But there large trees stopped any further progress. The branches struck her as she attempted to force her way through. An invisible hand seemed to grasp her dress. She violently turned round and saw that it was only creepers that had fallen on her.

She could distinguish nothing. A wall of darkness stood before her that she could not pierce. She knew not where to fly, and a horrible fear took hold of her.

With outstretched hands, stumbling, falling on loose bits of rock, she ran on, but as if in a nightmare. Iona felt that she could make no headway, but ever turned round as in a magic circle. For many a weary hour she struggled on, panting, exhausted. At last she could walk no more, and sank on the ground.

"Oh, Duncan," she sobbed, "where art thou? Where art thou?"

When she awoke from her heavy torpor, half swoon, half sleep, it was daylight. The fog had lifted, the sky was clear, and, looking around, she saw two men walking toward her. She hastily sprang to her feet in dismay as she recognized the tarts of Ronuk's men.

"Who art thou?" cried one of them, eyeing her suspiciously.

Iona hesitated, but, recognizing the impossibility of a disguise, replied, quietly.

"I am the daughter of the laird of MacShanly. I have lost my way in the fog and wandered all night."

Without making any reply the two men began to whisper to one another. At last one said:—"Thou must be tired, lady. Our master, the laird of Ronuk, is encamped not far from here. Come, and he will offer thee food and shelter."

"I thank thee," the girl replied, quickly, "for thy kind offer, but my father must be anxious, and I would fain return to him."

"No, thou art pale and faint. That cannot be. Come, and my master will help thee to return home."

(To be concluded next week.)

Sunday Meeting of G. A. R.

Sunday afternoon the members of Lemaist Post, No. 71, G. A. R., held their first Sunday afternoon meeting in G. A. R. hall, and it was an interesting one. Quite a number of the old comrades were present. It is the intention to hold these meetings on the first Sunday in each month.

It Pays to Advertise.

Several days ago Mr. Fletcher Scott lost a check book of no value to any one except himself. He placed an ad in the "Lost" column of the Advocate and bright and early the next morning the book was returned to him. Another demonstration of the fact that ads in the Advocate certainly pay.

Police Court.

Only twelve cases were in police court this morning, the lightest grist of many Mondays in the court at the city prison. The offenders were all of small caliber and the sentences ranged from $1 and costs to $5 and costs. Drunks were arrested by Captain Bell and Officers Burke, Lining, Chester, Shively, Petrey, Brooke and Abbott. One train rider was taken in by Detective Roberts. Five prowlers who were bothering people in the west end of the city, were arrested by Officers Gorman and Stewart.

Complimentary.

A special pension examiner was in the city in the interest of several members of Co. G, Seventh O. V. I., Spanish war, who have made applications for pensions. No doubt several of the worthy ones will receive relief at the hands of the government. The examiner, while here, states that there never was a single claim advanced for special consideration by the Hon. W. A. Ashbrook that was turned down by reason of not having been placed before the committee in a legal manner. Many claims of this class are turned down by reason of improper construction. This certainly is a compliment to the Hon. Wm. A. Ashbrook.

It is Chief Foley's intention to provide his father with artificial limb and in the near future we may look for Jerry Foley back among L's Newark friends.

Stauberville Making Preparations.

A letter received by Col. Cliff Rosebrough from the headquarters of the Department of Ohio, United Spanish War Veterans, states that the city of Stauberville will eclipse all former efforts in entertaining the veterans of the war with Spain. There is every reason to believe that Sam Williams Camp will send a large delegation. Every member of this camp should be in attendance at the next regular meeting in Memorial Hall on Wednesday evening, June 10.

Fire Destroys Coat.

Jacob Reinhardt, a young man employed at the New York Clothing store, North Park Place, had a valuable coat completely destroyed by fire in the store Monday morning. The young man had been smoking a cigar, but having occasion to wait upon a customer, put the lighted stub in his pocket. A blaze was started which destroyed the coat and started burning the wall, but prompt action on the part of the employees stopped the fire before it did any further damage. No alarm was turned in.

OHIO'S NEXT GOVERNOR
(Ohio Democrat).
General Oliver H. Hughes, adjutant general under Governor Patterson, and of present state without commission, discussed politics, and spoke enthusiastically of the prospects for a Democratic victory for this year. General Hughes said: "I travel all over the state and can see nothing but harmony and harmony. It is a foregone fact, in my estimation, that Judge Harmon will be next governor of Ohio. "There will be no antagonism among the Democrats. In fact he is the biggest man who has ever been put up at the head of any ticket. Republican sentiment is swaying in the balance, with a strong leaning toward Judge Harmon. I have heard many avowed Republicans state that they are going to vote for him.

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON ONE OF THE PICTURESCUE FIGURES OF CONGRESS.
Prominent in the Great Fight Now Being Waged at the Convention City on the Lake.

Washington, June 8—"Mr. Cannon was born of God-fearing and man-loving parents. He made himself, and he did a darn poor job of it." This is the autobiography of "Uncle Joe" of Illinois. He wrote it upon request, and he got almost as much into the two lines as Grant, or Sherman, or Mark Twain did into volumes. Born a Quaker 72 years ago in years ago in North Carolina, reared to manhood in a clearing on the banks of the Wabash in Indiana, lawyer, banker, and near-millionaire, Joseph G. Cannon is often cited to prove that the grand old type of American manhood, rugged and sturdy, that characterized the fathers of the Republic, is not always spoiled by wealth. The manufacturing process to which Cannon referred in his autobiography occurred in the House of Representatives. For more than a generation he has been a member of that body, and for five years its Speaker. The raw material was recognized as such. "The gentleman must have oats in his pocket," exclaimed a member, when Cannon made his first speech in the House. The "kid" member from the West admitted it, and suggested there might also be hay seed in his hair. Last winter that speech was recited from the floor by one of his admirers, while Cannon sat blushing in the speaker's chair, his vest unbuttoned from top to bottom, his frazzled hair so thin it could no longer hold a massed if it tried, his bones clothed in homespun, and a toothpick in his mouth—just as picturesque a figure as he was 33 years before. His habits and manners are all pervading. They permeate "Uncle Joe's" clothes, just as they do his system. They are likewise copyrighted. About a year ago when the speaker went to New York, the metropolitan newspapers commented on his "25 cent hat." In reality, it was a $10 Panama, but it had been canonized. The best tailors in Washington made his suits, but an everlasting contest between the garments and their owner as to their right to shield him from the elements, gave his clothes a withered appearance the year around. The tobacco habit characterizes him as nothing else. The angle at which his cigar is held is regarded as a barometer of his spirits. Only on one occasion was the cigar ever observed at "loosely." That was the night of election day in 1890, when Cannon and McKinley were defeated for Congress. Both were at headquarters in Chicago. Finally when all others were gone, except one or two, Cannon said to McKinley: "William, there is no use of our trying to fool one another, is there?"

Well, doesn't it beat hell!" and with that his cigar fell to the lowest angle it ever registered. It was the only defeat he ever suffered. Plug tobacco is another Cannon acquaintance. The speaker, will stop a man on the street to ask for a chew. He has gotten many a chew and a vote for Congress besides by asking for the first. At the time of the bicycle craze, a friend asked Cannon how he was progressing in his attempt to ride. "Oh, fairly well: I succeeded today for the first time in spitting without falling off," he responded with pride. He is said to have two other habits, cursing Democrats and raising the ante at inopportune moments. As a public speaker, Cannon never set the world on fire with his eloquence. But he has often floored his opponents by the soundness of his logic, his ready flow of humor, his rugged, homely language, and his windlass gestures. A good baseball pitcher was lost when Uncle Joe became a politician. If he wants to emphasize what he is about to say, he begins to shake his head after the fashion of a horse eating hay from a stuffed manger. By the time the climax is reached his trusty left arm is describing a circumference with a four foot diameter. He gets lots of exercise out of his morning breathing exercises in front of the open window of his bed room. He professes to believe that all politicians, including himself, are humbugs, and he treats them as such. His faith is pinned to the common people, although he can walk along with Labor on one arm and Capital on the other without missing a step. "The constitution and the laws do not make the safety of this nation," he once remarked. "It is the people who make it." Cannon belonged to the Quaker faith until his wedding day. He married a Methodist woman, now dead, and his church called upon him to repent from marrying outside the faith. Angered at this rebuke, he excommunicated himself by exclaiming: "If you mean that I am to get up in meeting and say that I am sorry I married Mary, I won't do it. I'm damned if I'm sorry, and I'm damned if I say I am." "I wouldn't give three whoops in Hades," said he once to a woman, "for any man whose heart would not beat faster, who would not breathe deeper, whose eyes would not take fire, whose spirit would not swell as if to strangle him, who would not be moved even to the shedding of tears—and that without any shame—by the voices of birds and children, by a mother's smile, by a song that is sung from the heart, by noble oratory or the noble action of actors on the stage; by any human art through which the spirit of beauty in another."

With the homeliness of Lincoln, he has none of the melancholy of that other famous son of Illinois. With the power of "Czar" Reed, he has been as approachable and as human as the corner grocery keeper. He has no better friend in Congress today than John Sharp Williams, the Democratic floor leader.

THE COLISEUM
By ROBERTUS LOVE
Copyright, 1908, by Robertus Love.
CHICAGO, JUNE 16
The fourteenth national convention of the Republican party will meet June 16 in the Coliseum at Chicago to nominate candidates for president and vice president of the United States. Among the well known men who in all probability will receive votes in the convention for the presidential nomination may be mentioned in alphabetical order Joseph G. Cannon, Charles W. Fairbanks, Joseph B. Foraker, Charles E. Hughes, Philander C. Knox, Robert M. La Follette and William H. Taft. From all the states and territories 980 delegates will sit in the convention, which will be called to order by Harry S. New, chairman of the Republican national committee. A majority, or 491 votes, will suffice to nominate. Fifty-two years ago the first Republican national convention, where candidates were nominated, was held in Philadelphia. Robert Emmet of New York was temporary chairman of this historic convention, which came to order in Musical Fund hall, on Locust street. The permanent chairman was Henry S. Lane of Indiana. About 700 delegates and 2,000 spectators were present. On the 18th of June the famous "Pathfinder of the Rockies," John C. Fremont, then of California, was named for president on the first ballot. For vice president William L. Dayton of New Jersey was nominated. Dayton received all but thirty-one votes on the first ballot. Twenty of the opposing votes were cast for a comparatively obscure lawyer of Springfield, Ill., named Abraham Lincoln. In 1860 the Republican convention first met in Chicago, which has come to be its favorite meeting place. May 18 the body was called to order in a structure known as "the Wigwag," about 10,000 people being present. William H. Seward of New York was the leading candidate prior to the convention and also on the first ballot. His name was placed before the convention by William M. Evans of New York. Norman Judd of Illinois placed Abraham Lincoln in nomination amid tremendous applause and some hisses. Carl Schurz, then of Wisconsin, seconded Seward's nomination. Mr. DeLano of Ohio arose and said: "I desire to second the nomination of the man who can split rails and maul Democrats, Abraham Lincoln." Lincoln passed Seward on the second ballot and was nominated for president on the third ballot, receiving 254 votes to 110½ for Seward. For the vice president Roscoe Conkling of New York placed Grant in nomination. Conkling was described by one who saw him in this convention as a man who "has the physique of a gladiator and the manner of a man who would enjoy being a king." Garfield nominated John Sherman of Ohio. James P. Joy of Michigan made the nominating speech for Blaine, calling him James H. instead of James G. Nevertheless there was half an hour's cheering for the "Plumed Knight." Colonel Ingersoll, on the platform, snatched a shawl from a lady's shoulders and joined in the enthusiasm. A deadlock between Grant and Blaine resulted in the nomination of a dark horse, Garfield. For vice president Chester Alan Arthur of New York was nominated. In the convention of 1884 at Chicago appeared as a delegate from New York a young man of twenty-six years who was destined to become a foremost figure in Republican councils. His name was Theodore Roosevelt. He came in wearing a straw hat and looking boyish, according to one of the New York newspaper correspondents, who thus described him further: "Theodore Roosevelt, sitting by George William Curtis, also made a speech, showing himself for the first time to the western people and being somewhat cheered. His square head, matted with short, dry sandy hair, and his eyeglasses and nervously forcible gestures were remarked." Young Mr. Roosevelt's speech was in draw Johnson of his state, a southerner who had stood staunchly by the Union cause during the war and was exceptionally bitter in his denunciations of the secessionists. Johnson was nominated on the first ballot. The 1868 convention returned to the early love, Chicago. May 25 was the opening day. Crosby Opera House was the place. The temporary chairman was Carl Schurz, that remarkable German-American who had become a major general in the Federal army during the war. General John A. Logan of Illinois placed General Grant in nomination. The general was nominated unanimously, the cheering lasting half an hour. No other candidate was considered. For vice president ex-Senator Henry S. Lane of Indiana placed before the convention the name of Schuyler Colfax of his state, speaker of the national house of representatives, who received the nomination. At the convention of 1872, held in Philadelphia, President Grant again received a unanimous nomination. An effort was made to renominate Vice President Colfax, but Senator Henry Wilson of Massachusetts was declared the nominee. Cincinnati entertained the convention of 1876. Theodore M. Pomeroy of New York presided temporarily, yielding the gavel to Edward McPherson of Pennsylvania, permanent chairman. The Exposition building was the scene of the gathering. The convention met June 14. Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio was the nominee for president, and William A. Wheeler of New York was named for vice president. The Democrats nominated Samuel J. Tilden of New York and Thomas A. Hendricks of Indiana. So close was the election that the famous electoral commission of fifteen men was created to determine the issue. The commission declared the election of Hayes and Wheeler by a majority of one electoral vote. In the convention James G. Blaine of Maine was a prominent candidate, being placed before the house by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll of Illinois, who made on that occasion the celebrated "Plumed Knight" speech. In referring to a speech of Blaine's in the house of representatives Colonel Ingersoll said, "Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen forehead of every defamer of this country and malinger of its honor." In 1880 the Republicans met in Chicago, in the Exposition building, described by one correspondent as "one of the most splendid barns that were ever constructed." Ex-President Grant, who had been out of office one term, was made the issue of this convention. A strong following proposed to make him again the candidate, but the opponents of a third term were still stronger. Roscoe Conkling of New York placed Grant in nomination. Conkling was described by one who saw him in this convention as a man who "has the physique of a gladiator and the manner of a man who would enjoy being a king." Garfield nominated John Sherman of Ohio. James P. Joy of Michigan made the nominating speech for Blaine, calling him James H. instead of James G. favor of the selection of John R. Lynch, the first negro ever selected to preside over a national convention as temporary chairman. The nominees of this convention were James G. Blaine of Maine for president and John A. Logan of Illinois for vice president. At the convention of 1888 in Chicago Chauncey M. Depew was a leading candidate. John Sherman and Blaine were also far to the front in the running. Colonel Ingersoll was there, but he was strongly opposed to the nomination of his "Plumed Knight." Blaine was traveling in Europe at the time. Ingersoll favored Judge Walter Q. Gresham "of Indiana and Illinois." John Sherman led on the first and second ballots. Depew, who ran fourth, then withdrew. One delegate voted for McKinley, who arose and declared that he was for John Sherman and could not permit his name to go before the convention. After a struggle lasting six days Depew's New York strength was thrown to Benjamin Harrison, who received the nomination for president, with Levi P. Morton of New York as the vice presidential nominee. William McKinley was permanent chairman and J. Sloat Fassett of New York temporary chairman of the 1892 convention in Minneapolis beginning June 8. In this convention for the first time women delegates sat, two of that sex being accredited from the state of Wyoming, where women vote. Speaker Thomas B. Reed was a spectator in Exposition hall, close to the falls of St. Anthony, on the Mississippi river, where the convention sat. Mr. Depew also was there with a speech. McKinley was "the most dramatic figure in the hall, the man who looks like Napoleon." President Harrison was re-nominated on the first ballot, and for vice president Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Tribune, was named unanimously. Depew's eloquent speech in nominating Harrison was the hit of the convention. Blaine again was placed in nomination, receiving 182 votes. McKinley, though chairman, received 182 votes for the nomination. Harrison and Reid were defeated in November by Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois. St. Louis was the convention city in 1896. The Auditorium, built specially for such affairs, held 17,000 people. Charles W. Fairbanks, then a candidate to succeed Senator Voorhees of Indiana, was temporary chairman. Senator Thurston of Nebraska was permanent chairman. For six weeks McKinley's nomination had been a foregone conclusion. Garret A. Hobart of New Jersey was made the vice presidential nominee. A dramatic incident was the withdrawal from the convention of Senator Teller of Colorado and other "free silver" delegates, the convention having adopted a gold standard platform. Senator Wolcott of Colorado was temporary chairman and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts permanent chairman of the 1900 convention in Philadelphia, where President McKinley was unanimously re-nominated. By special invitation seven of the 1856 convention survivors were present. Governor Theodore Roosevelt of New York was named for vice president against his own protest. Roosevelt was a delegate. He received all the votes but one, his own. In 1904 at Chicago the temporary chairman was Elihu Root and the permanent chairman Speaker Cannon. Cannon refused to run for vice president. Senator Cullom led an effort to nominate Congressman R. R. Hitt of Illinois for the place. President Roosevelt and Senator Fairbanks were unanimously nominated for president and vice president.

RIP VAN WINKLE.

Never was a more creditable performance given of "Rip Van Winkle" in Newark, which was greeted by the usual Sunday capacity houses. Mr. George W. Paige appeared to good advantage, as he is one of the many character comedians that could play such a character, as he was entirely lacking in artificial methods that has made so many actors stereotyped, and for this he won praise. Miss Jessye Lyons, had the strongest part of the ladies, and her impersonation of Gretchen did very well, and won her share of praise from the audience. The play will be repeated tonight and tomorrow. Wednesday matinee, another pink tea will be given to the ladies by the members of the stock company.

RETURNED FROM ABROAD.

On a trans-Atlantic liner sailed a man of great renown, returning after years abroad to visit his home town; when at last he stepped ashore, at the New York docks, a feeling overcame him, never caused by all his "rocks." And when a few hours later as down the village street he passed, 'twas keenest joy once more his boyhood friends to greet; one thing strange, however, that impressed him right away—the old homes had been painted and were looking bright and gay. The people in the old town had heard the story told: "Aurora Paint for Painting was worth its weight in gold;" one trial was all they needed, and even to this day—just try to sell them something else and see them turn away. Aurora Mixed Paint is an honest lead and oil paint, made from the best and purest materials. Manufactured by the Marietta Paint and Color Co., Marietta, O. When Chauffeur Lindsay, who was driving the car of A. H. Heisey Saturday afternoon, threw on the reverse lever to escape an oncoming interurban car bound to Zanesville, he backed into Nathan Denman, about 35 years of age, and knocked him to the pavement with such force that he was rendered partially unconscious and his head cut and bruised. Mr. Denman was placed in a cab by Officer Brooke and sent to the office of a physician.

No blame is attached to Mr. Heisey or to the chauffeur, for the accident happened in a peculiar way. A Granville car was standing on the north track in front of the interurban depot. On the south track the car for Zanesville pulled in, and sandwiched in between the cars were the automobile and a street sprinkler. To avoid the car and the water wagon the machine was reversed in time to strike Mr. Denman.

A large crowd gathered and traffic was stopped for a short time.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK BEGINS AT DENISON

Dr. E. W. Hunt, President of University Delivers Splendid Baccalaureate Sermon Sunday Morning at Baptist Church

SENIOR GIRLS PRESENT "MERCHANT OF VENICE"

Prominent Men Select Denison for Children's Education---Annual Sermon of Christian Associations---Field Day Exercises.

Granville, O., June 8—On Sunday morning the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of Denison university was preached in the Baptist church at 10 o'clock by Dr. E. W. Hunt, president of the university. The sermon throughout was very beautiful and impressive.

Dr. Hunt is not only an admirable college president, but is a powerful preacher in demand among the leading pulpits of the land. His baccalaureate sermon was one of his noblest efforts. In announcing his text, Matt. 6:33, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness," he declared that he sought on these occasions to set forth some one of the great constructive principles of life. This text is such, for what we seek is the clue to what we want, and what we want is a symptom of what we are. But this great truth is in danger of becoming a truism. A truism is simply a truth which has lost its power over our lives. The text is not mere advice; it is a command. Jesus, this expert in human life, orders us to make the spiritual first in all life. It is to come first in time, first in importance, first in constructive significance for our lives. Is it reasonable, practical or merely idealistic? Is it a rhetorical exaggeration used to rouse the jaded attention, or is it grounded in the eternal principle of things? We shall find it fundamental to life in its largest reality.

All through history the spiritual element has been supreme. Looking at history as a growth this is true. The great historian, John Fiske, admits this in these significant words: "From the dawn of life we see all things working toward the development of the highest spiritual qualities of man." Since the universe comes to a focus in the spiritual qualities of man you and I can afford to put it first. The climax of nature is found in the spiritual. It is the significant thread running through history and indicating its main thought and purpose. This significance appears in the great unconscious choices registered by races and nations as a whole rather than in the choices of kings and statesmen who are often mere puppets moved by elemental unseen forces. They are but foolish "philosophers of history," which ignore the supremacy of the spiritual meaning of history.

This supremacy of the spiritual is the truth and the bottom truth about society today. We are just beginning to get at the problem of how to live together among men. We believe things are improving, but we are not very proud of present conditions and not too confident of the future. A certain social nervousness is prevalent. The very vociferousness with which we shout "There are no classes in America" belies the assertion. Rich and poor are not getting on better together than a generation ago. We must seek a bigger principle. If all will recognize the supremacy of the spiritual it will help some. Jesus makes the spiritual supreme in society. He says, money is not worth stealing or getting unfairly. His teaching antagonizes the rich man with his unclean dollars, but it equally antagonizes the socialist who expects machinery to produce proper conditions of society. His teaching on covetousness strikes both the grasping rich and the envious poor. We are all tested by the spirit in which we bear our lack of wealth. The basic principle is that the spiritual element must be held supreme. And so he who is rich in knowledge alone and allows it to become a total absorbent of his life is as wrong as he who allows his lust for money to absorb his life. The worst thing about the liquor traffic is its enmity to the spiritual life. It develops the wild beast in men, their worst selves. And the most terrible feature of the employment of 1,700,000 American children at continuous toil is their exclusion from a chance for the development of their souls at the most tender and critical age. All of the ills of society would be helped by a recognition of the supremacy of the spiritual.

Personal life and thought must make the spiritual supreme. A courageous soul will drive its weak body to perform the impossible. Keep spiritual things first. Education is not enough. Victory in character involves a proper relation of will. Religion thus comes in. Settle your great questions and your small ones in the light of this great principle. It is as suicidal to ignore this fundamental law of the supremacy of spiritual things as to swallow arsenic or to leap from a great height.

This impressive sermon closed with a vivid illustration from the speaker's own knowledge of a man who had attained wealth only to find that in its pursuit he had missed all the culture which would enable him to enjoy the fruits of wealth, and who writing out a confession of this bitter failure, took his life the same night.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Granville, O., June 8—On Friday and Saturday night the Senior girls of this year's graduating class presented in Recital Hall William Shakespere's "Merchant of Venice," according to the Elizabethan method.

Recital Hall had been beautifully decorated for the occasion and the rendition of the beautiful play Saturday night was even more perfect than on Friday night, as all had an opportunity of rehearsing the play again.

The music for the occasion was furnished by the Denison orchestra, and was par excellent.

The scenes were changed by the scene shifters, Arthur Chaffee and Horace Huffman, attired in scene shifters' garb of yore olden times, performing the parts to perfection. The warriors' parts were well chosen, and each warrior acted the part true to life.

Especially commendable was Shylock, played by Lottie Graham. Her dramatic ability is most noteworthy. Bassonnie, Lottie Grandstaff, played a heavy part. Her voice carried well and much feeling was displayed.

Eleanor Chaffee is deserving of much praise.

Portia, Irene Conley, charmed the audience. Her acting was exceedingly good and she was the recipient of considerable applause.

Launcelot Gobbe, the clown, got off some fine jokes, and whenever she appeared the audience was in an uproar of laughter.

In reproducing the "Merchant of Venice" in the manner in which it was given Friday and Saturday nights the reflection is thrown largely upon the ones taking part. The performance was certainly a credit to the Senior girls and their trainer, Miss Eckert, of Maumee. From beginning to end, the selection of characters was good, and each took his or her part well. The costumes were excellent, resembling much the styles of the Shakespearean age. The girls, especially, wore beautiful gowns and looked charming.

The songs sung by Mrs. Wilson were old time songs and she sang them all in her usual pleasing manner.

DENISON PROMINENT.

Granville, O., June 8—Denison is coming more and more into the eye of the public as one of the most desirable places in American for collegiate instruction. Rev. George T. Webb of Chicago, who is secretary of the International Baptist Young People's Union of America, and is himself from Toronto, Canada, in looking over the field of this country and Canada for a place to send his two sons to college next year, has selected Denison university. Dr. Cornelius Woelkin of Rochester Theological seminary, one of the most noted men in the Baptist denomination, has selected Denison as the place for his two nephews, who are to come a little later. Interested inquiries reach Denison from every part of the continent. This, and the fact that Denison's present registration comes from 30 states and several foreign countries, shows that Denison university has passed beyond the rank of a merely local or state institution. It is an interesting thing that the college began 75 years ago with a widespread constituency, having a generous proportion of its students from the South, even as far south as Louisiana, but the anti-slavery agitation after 1845 cut off the Southern patronage.

DR. HULLEY DELIVERS

THE ANNUAL SERMON

Granville, O., June 8—The annual sermon before the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations of Denison university was delivered Sunday evening at the Baptist church by President Lincoln B. Hulley, LL. D., of John B. Stetson university, DeLand, Fla. Dr. Hulley received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Denison at the commencement of 1907.

The text of the sermon was taken from Matt. 16:24: "Then let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow me." It was a fitting accompaniment of Dr. Hunt's sermon in the morning, and set forth the Christian life as a law of service in a most vivid and impressive way. The text was treated under its three most natural divisions, i. e., the denial of self, the bearing of the cross, and the following of Christ. The denial of self was shown to be not the mere infliction of hardship upon one's self, but the acquisition of the power of saying "No" to self, to one's lower desires. Even self culture may be selfishness. Self denial for its own sake is of no use. Jesus was master of his soul. We should learn to master our. Cross bearing, the speaker interpreted as not the bearing of one's own trials and burdens, however patiently, but as the bearing of the burdens of others. The law of service is the supreme thing in the Christian life. Service is the test of your Christianity. It is the test of your education.

Under his third head, the following of Christ, the speaker referred impressively to the singing of what has come to be called Denison's war song, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," at the Y. M. C. A. service the same morning. The striking sermon was illustrated by many beautiful poetical quotations.

The music by the choir of the Baptist church on commencement Sunday was very fine, and reflected much credit upon the director, Miss F. J. Farrar, and on Miss Benedict, the organist of the conservatory. A solo passage by Mr. Harold Thomas of the Senior class, and quartets morning and evening rendered by Miss Emily Farrar, Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson Wilson, and Messrs. Marsh and Harold Thomas, added greatly to the effectiveness of the musical service. In the evening, especially, in "Angels of Jesus," the beautiful contralto of Mrs. Wilson and the clear, bird-like notes of Miss Farrar's soprano, were a great delight to the congregation.

All will be enthusiastic over the announcement informally made, that it is now expected that Mrs. Wilson will be able to continue with the conservatory next year, where she has been so highly appreciated for two years past. The prospect of losing her had cast a gloom over the friends of the college which is now most happily dispelled. It would be difficult to replace her admirable teaching and her superb singing.

Charles A. Carman, D. U. '09, left for Cleveland Saturday morning where he will spend a few days preparatory to his summer work.

Miss Josephine Lewis, a charming young woman of Dayton, who has been visiting here for several days, has returned home.

Miss Florence Beckel of Columbus, is spending commencement week in Granville.

Mrs. John Guy, a former resident of Newark, but who for a number of years made her home in Pueblo, Col., is visiting her daughter here for a short time. Mrs. Guy was a visitor Friday with the Missionary Circle of Newark, which met at the home of Mrs. W. D. Fulton.

ANNUAL FIELD DAY.

Granville, O., June 8—The annual field day sports of Denison university, were held on Beaver Field Monday morning and although the crowd was not as large as could have been wished for, it was a very enthusiastic one, and the sports were among the best that have ever been pulled off by students of Denison. Prizes, donated by Granville and Newark merchants, were awarded the winners in the various events, and the sports were very much enjoyed by those present. Following is the result of the various events:

100 yards dash, 1 Coe, 2 Parker; time 10 3-5 sec.

Save for an occasional kick from O'Day or Wilson about the umpiring of Lotshaw, the games Sunday were all that could be desired from the standpoint of sport and attendance. The largest crowd of the season—3000 people—was present on the first boosters' day to see the double header between Newark and Marion. Sensational fielding, especially by the outfielders, and heavy hitting marked the passing of the innings, and at all times the final result was doubtful. The work of the players-umpires was generally good and save for about ten minutes in the second game, when the Marion team all but quit the field after Lotshaw had rendered a decision against them, nothing happened to mar the contests.

First Game.
On two errors, a base on balls; two hits and a stolen base, the Diggers counted three times in the first frame of the first game. Farrell grounded out, Wolfe whiffed, then King doubled. Tate was walked and O'Day singled, scoring King. Through an error of Wratten and another by Smith, late and O'Day pounded home. Wilson followed the example set by Wolfe and struck out. With two men down in the fourth Smith was passed. Locke's two bagger scored him, and when Gygli singled Locke pranced home. Both teams counted in the seventh. Lotshaw was passed and was sacrificed to second by Wilson. Anderson singled to left field and "Windy" tried to score. A pretty throw by Snyder caught him at the plate and he was out. Wilmot singled and Anderson scored.

In the Molder half of the seventh, Locke, Gygli and Murray all bumped for singles. Wratten fled out to left and Locke scored. Then Winters doubled, Gygli scored, but Murray was called out at third on a throw from Farrell. Moore grounded out. The winning run for Marion was made in the eighth, when Wolfe singled, was sacrificed to second by King. On Tate's long drive to Locke Wolfe scored. O'Day also fled out to Locke.

HA, NEW UMP'S!

Umpire Hardesty, resident of Belleville and an experienced man in baseball, will go to work this afternoon for President Quinn of the Ohio State league. His first assignment will be at Newark.

Umpire Keifer knocked off toil there during Saturday's game, saying that he was ill. Neither he nor a Newark club official notified President Quinn until yesterday, when it was too late to rush a substitute over for the double header with Marion. Much to the regret of the league president, players were drafted to render the decisions. Under the circumstances, there was nothing else to do.

Hardesty is known as a fearless official and is one of the kind who is boss from beginning to end. He will be backed up, as all of the Ohio State league umpires have been. His name has been upon President Quinn's list of eligibles since early in the year.—Ohio State Journal.

PEARCE IS INJURED

The Cincinnati Reds played Scranton, Pa., Sunday and Pearce was injured. In speaking of the game the Enquirer says:

"The game was played on a diamond laid out inside a race track far beyond the city limits, as the pious citizens of Scranton look upon Sabbath baseball as a deadly sin and the downtown park cannot be used on the first day of the week. The field was hard as a flintstone and covered with pebbles, which made clean play difficult, and also a more serious effect in the clever young catcher of the Reds.

"Pearce hit to center in the fifth inning and attempted to stretch his single into a two-bagger. Seeing that the play at second was going to be close he slid into the bag feet first.

"His spikes caught into the hard ground and he turned his right ankle painfully. He could not bear his weight on the injured member and had to leave the game. Schei going behind the bat and Spade to first base. Pearce's ankle was in bad shape last night, and he will not be able to play for some time.

CHANGED THE NAME.

Among the closing acts of the general conference at Baltimore, the time honored title, "presiding elder," was abolished by the adoption of a minority report from the revision committee, recommending that the name be changed to "district superintendent." By a vote of 322 ayes to 210 noes. The radical change of terms is the outgrowth of a desire to denote the officer more correctly. It has been felt for a long while that since the presiding elder is today in reality a superintendent, that title should be given him, since his office is no longer mere sacramental, but administrative.

MORE WINNINGS.

It looked like old times to see the grandstand and the bleachers full yesterday. The people that went to the game certainly got their money's worth, too.

The Molders have pried off the lid to the spice box at last and their work Saturday was mighty pleasing to the fans. With the exception of the first inning in the first game Sunday the boys played the finest kind of ball.

Umpire Keifer was taken sick in the game Saturday and Locke and Wilson worked. In the games Sunday four more players took their turns. President Quinn should have an extra man that he can send in case of an emergency like this.

The fielders all had mighty hard fields to work in the last three games. They were kept on the jump almost continually.

"Lefty" Webb pitched as pretty a game Saturday as a person could wish to see. Marion only got three hits off him, and two of them were of the scratchiest kind.

Tate lost his head when he struck out in the first game yesterday. Catching his bat by the heavy end, he broke it in two against the ground.

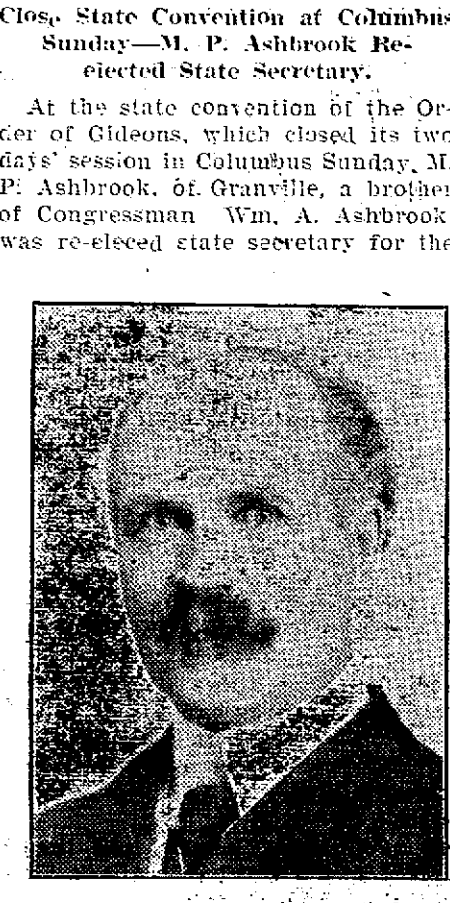

Ells has already made good with the players and the crowd. He is a hard worker and knows the game from start to finish.

After the game today the team again takes the road for nine days. While on this trip they visit Springfield, Marion and Lima.

GIDEONS

Clos. State Convention at Columbus Sunday—M. P. Ashbrook Re-elected State Secretary.

At the state convention of the Order of Gideons, which closed its two days' session in Columbus Sunday, M. P. Ashbrook, of Granville, a brother of Congressman Wm. A. Ashbrook, was re-elected state secretary for the fifth consecutive time. President A. B. Skipton, of Zanesville, shared the fifth re-election with Mr. Ashbrook, the vote being by acclamation.

M. P. ASHBROOK.

The Gideons comprise an organization of aggressive Christian traveling men who have a big membership throughout the country. Mr. Ashbrook is one of the six national trustees of the order.

The convention was held in the Columbus Railway Y. M. C. A. quarters. The officers were: A. B. Skipton, president; M. P. Ashbrook, Granville, secretary; first vice president, H. C. Shreve, Cincinnati; second vice president, W. O. Miles, Columbus; third vice president, John Emerson, Toledo; fourth vice president, Smith Bartlett, Cleveland; fifth vice president, R. H. Pengelly, Bellefontaine; national trustee, Mr. Ashbrook.

The Gideons conducted services in the chapel at the Ohio penitentiary Sunday, addresses being delivered by several speakers, including Mr. Ashbrook. Among the officers elected was J. M. Taylor, of Orrville, a prominent member of the organization who was chosen state chaplain.

There is now a movement on foot among the Gideons to be brought before the national convention, held in Louisville, Ky., July 25 to 27, to establish a fund for placing Bibles in all hotel reading rooms over the country. The order is also making a great effort toward the prohibition of profanity; and a number of other movements toward the moral uplifting of the associated commercial travelers.

HEALTH REPORT

The report of Dr. W. H. Knauss, chief of the health department, for the past month is, in part, as follows:

Deaths, 31, including 16 males and 15 females; fumigations for smallpox, 3; scarlet fever, 2, and tuberculosis, 2. Births, 58, males, 33; females, 25.

A discovery of large deposits of tin ore is reported as having been made recently in the Brooks Mountains in Alaska. The details of the strike are not given.

GAMES TRANSFERRED.

Newark was to have gone to Springfield on Tuesday to play a series of three games, but the games have been transferred here, so there will be a game at Wenle park tomorrow.

No horses are to be seen on the farms in Bolivia, bullocks or oxen being universally employed.

BRYAN

timates four delegates from Maryland for Bryan.

"Two more Rocky Mountain states swung into line for Bryan during the week—Idaho and Nevada. Nevada instructed, and while the representatives from Idaho are silent as to whether the delegation was instructed, information is that both sides were for Bryan. The contest in the convention was between the Mormon and anti-Mormon factions and both are loyal to Bryan.

"It will be seen from the foregoing that Bryan not only holds his lead, but it has now become a question as to how nearly unanimous his vote will be a Denver.

"The opposition is becoming discouraged at the remarkable manifestation of Bryan's strength with the masses, just as the Republican managers are becoming alarmed. No such demonstration of influence with the rank and file, the backbone of the party, has ever been made in this country, except by Theodore Roosevelt. In Maryland, the two United States senators declined to go as delegates at large, because they are not in sympathy with the Bryan platform and do not think he can carry the state. Gov. Johnson's friends say that the chief executive of Minnesota realized long ago that he could not defeat Bryan and is only working with a view to getting the nomination in 1912.

"The states yet to hold conventions are:

"Montana and New Mexico, June 10; Virginia, June 11; Utah, June 12; Colorado and Maine, June 15; Oregon, June 16; Tennessee and Mississippi, June 17; Kentucky, June 22; North Carolina, June 24; Vermont, June 26, and Georgia, June 27.

"The contest against Bryan will be kept up to the time the last state convention is held. It seems to be the aim of the opposition now to do everything to prevent Bryan from getting control of the national committee. Seeing that it is probably impossible to prevent the nomination of Bryan, the next best thing to bringing about his defeat is to try to hold the machinery of the party. Thus Colonel Guffey will do everything to hold his place from Pennsylvania, and Colonel J. T. McGraw of West Virginia, seems already assured of continuing as the member of the committee from that state. New York and New Jersey will elect men who are not ultra-Bryan men, and the same thing may be said of Illinois, Ohio and other states. Most of these states have been compelled to send Bryan delegates, but the leaders have managed to hold on to the reins of power in the hope that after the election the Bryan wave will subside and the conservatives will once more come into their own.

"In view of this phase of the contest the results in states like Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina and Georgia will be watched with even greater interest, as indicating the complexion of the national committee rather than whether they instruct for Bryan or not. OBITUARY

MARY D. HALL.

Mary Lumbauld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dumbauld, was born in Perry county, Ohio, Jan. 25, 1849. She was one year of age when her parents moved to Bennington township, Licking county. The family consisted of six brothers and three sisters—one brother and two sisters, with their parents, having preceded her to their home above. She was united in marriage to J. Nelson Hall Dec. 3, 1868. The Lord has blessed them with ten children, all of whom have grown to manhood and womanhood and were with her in her last sickness, and with their father and five grandchildren are now left to mourn her departure.

She was baptized in infancy by the Rev. Mr. Dechond, pastor of the German Reformed church of Perry county, since which time she has always lived to be a consistent, loving, faithful and dutiful wife and mother, a kind neighbor and a dear friend to all who knew her.

During her last sickness she gave to each of her ten children a beautiful Bible, that they may follow the life she has led.

She departed this life June 2, 1908, aged 59 years, 4 months and 7 days.

The funeral services were conducted at the home Thursday, June 4, at 2 p. m., by Rev. Mr. Converse, of Columbus. Text, "Who healeth all his diseases?" Psalm 103:3.

Interment was made in the Lock cemetery.

MISS ELLA SULLIVAN.

Miss Ella Sullivan of Cumberland, Md., died Sunday at 2 p. m. Miss Sullivan was well known here and was an aunt of Mrs. David Dowden of East Locust street. Mrs. Dowden was with her aunt at the time of her demise.

MISS MATTIE HARTMAN.

Hebron, O., June 3.—Mattie Hartman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hartman, residing three miles south of here, died at 11 o'clock Sunday evening, aged 11 years. The child fell on last Thursday and broke her arm, which on account of the arteries refusing to convey the blood properly, had to be amputated Sunday, and the child died Sunday evening. She is survived by her parents, one sister and three brothers.

The funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home, Rev. J. R. Tibbles officiating. Interment will be made in Kirkersville cemetery.

MRS. KATHERINE WRIGHT.

Mrs. Katherine M. Vance Wright departed this life Thursday, June 4, 1908, at 12:30 p. m., at the home of her parents, at the age of 23 years, five months and 9 days.

Mrs. Wright united with the M. E. church of this place some 12 years ago, under the pastorate of Rev. Ricketts. She was a young woman of pleasing, lovable and womanly nature, possessing those attributes of true womanhood that made her a general favorite and endeared her to all, and her passing away is mourned not alone by her husband and little daughter, father, mother, sisters and brother, who survive her, but by a host of sympathizing friends.

The floral offerings were many and of a very select nature. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Harbaugh. Burial at the Wilson cemetery.

CHANGES AT AUDITORIUM.

Mr. Willard Graham, the popular theatrical man who was connected with the Auditorium theater under Charles E. Matthews' management, arrived in the city Sunday from his home in Chicago to take charge of the management of the house for the summer season, for Mr. Will D. Harris. Mr. Graham has just closed a successful season's engagement with W. B. Patton's amusement enterprises.

Mr. James Hall, who has been managing the summer theater up to the present time, has been transferred to Hamilton, O., in Mr. Harris' interest, at least temporarily.

Mr. Starling Morse, secretary and treasurer of the house for the summer, will continue here in his present capacity.

The management has taken the full orchestra from the theater for the present, and has secured Miss Grace Miller, formerly at the Orpheum, to be pianist there for the rest of the summer.

Don't think that piles can't be cured. Thousands of obstinate cases have been cured by Doan's Ointment. 50 cents at any drug store.

FRIGHTFUL WRECK

failed to get a "slow-down" on turning the level when the Hartshorn curve was reached, just below Idlewild park.

Railway officials are busy collecting data, the names of witnesses and facts bearing on the case.

NOTES.

When the collision occurred Newark and Marion ball teams were engaged in playing the ninth inning, and within five minutes after the crash reached the ears of the crowd, spectators, players and all left the grounds, hurrying to offer assistance.

Fortunately Doctors Shiner, Cosner, Baker, Knauss and probably several others whose names were not learned, were present to aid the injured and carry them to places of shelter.

People living in the neighborhood of the scene of the accident offered their homes for temporary resting places for the injured, and several people had their wounds dressed in houses near the parks.

Several women who congregated from Idlewild and Wehrle parks fainted at the sight of the bleeding victims crawling from the midst of the debris.

Many of the children who were picnicking at Idlewild were thrown into a panic when the accident occurred, and were kept in the park grounds, and away from the ambulances and prancing horses, only by the most difficult efforts on the part of the police and the older spectators.

A number of horses became frightened in the excitement, but no serious accidents resulted.

Of the half dozen police officers taken to the scene of the accident, all were kept busy holding back the curious crowd, and no violence was necessary.

Every one who heard the crash of the cars as they came together and witnessed the spreading of them as they telescoped turned white with fear, thinking that undoubtedly many lives had been crushed out. It certainly was a narrow escape and all who were passengers are doubtless thanking their lucky stars that it was no worse.

When Miss Williams was brought from the car with her face covered with blood, as was also her white shirt waist, one woman exclaimed, "My God, her face is cut off!" and immediately fainted away. She was carried into a nearby house.

The automobiles at the park were all pressed into service and carried the injured to the city. They certainly came in handy.

One gentleman sitting on the bleachers at the ball game who witnessed the accident became so excited that he started to wade across the canal before he realized what he was doing. After he had waded in above his knees, he turned, and getting out, crossed the bridge.

Police Chief Zengibiel was equal to the occasion, and within five minutes after the crash had a patrol lot of officers racing at breakneck speed for the scene. They rendered valuable aid in keeping the crowd from interfering with the work of clearing the wreck.

It was indeed fortunate that a number of our physicians are lovers of the national game of ball. They were assisting in caring for the injured within a few moments after the cars came together.

When the timbers were cut away and the debris cleaned from the wreck, a shudder went through the crowd as the word was passed around that someone was pinned under the wreckage. It proved to be a rumor only.

Closer inspection will undoubtedly be made of all cars here after to see that all the working appliances are in proper shape. The traction officials claim that the car whose air brakes had refused to work had passed inspection and was in shape for traffic when it left the car barns.

METER STATION AND PIPE LINE

The North American Oil and Gas company completed its meter station and pipe line Saturday and this morning at 8 o'clock gas was turned in the 8-inch suction line of the Ohio Fuel Supply company of Columbus. This 8-inch line is a suction line which the Ohio Fuel company brought down at great expense from the north about three miles to the wells of the local company. This line is directly connected with the Homer pumping station and this gives the local company a good line to feed into.

The North American is a local company, of which Geo. Howell is president and is backed principally by local capital. This company has a large acreage in Ohio and as they now have found a market for their gas several more wells will be put down. The officers of the company are feeling very good over the financial prospects of the company.

The company is incorporated for $300,000, and many of the leading business men of Newark are among the stockholders.

This company has some large holdings in southern Ohio and expect to do some work in this field as they are quite confident of getting some nice oil development.

OCEAN GROVE

MUSIC SEASON WILL OPEN IN JULY WITH A SPLENDID PROGRAM.

Former Dean of Conservatory of Music at Denison Connected With Annual Festivities.

Ocean Grove, N. J., June 8.—The Ocean Grove musical season will open early in July this year, with what promises to be the greatest concert schedule ever planned for a summer resort. The season will call for an expenditure of $20,000 in contrast with the $10,000 of previous years for artists and musical organizations. The list of artists engaged includes the names of Nordica, Schumann-Heink, Homer, Ellen Beach Yaw, Caroline Hudson, and the usual number of tenors and basses, while the list of musical organizations includes Victor Herbert and his orchestra, the U. S. Marine band, and the Royal Welsh Ladies' choir of 40 voices. This last-named organization is direct from Wales and is said to be a remarkable chorus.

The new $20,000 organ is to be opened on July 3 with a concert by Mark Andrews, the well known organist. From August 10 to 13 there will be a great convention of organists from all over this country, during which time Edward Lemare, the English organist, will give daily concerts. It is estimated that 2,000 organists will be given daily. Organ recitals will be given daily throughout the season, from 4:30 to 5:30.

Besides these attractions, the usual orchestra of sixty will be maintained and the daily popular concerts given. Two oratorios, the "Elijah" and the "Messiah," will be performed with the usual soloists, an augmented orchestra, and a chorus numbering from 600 to 1,000 voices, the latter including the New York and Brooklyn choruses as well as the local chorus.

Arthur L. Judson, former dean of the Conservatory of Music, of Denison university, is connected, prominently, with the annual Ocean Grove festivals.

BAILLIE'S ANTI-RUST ROOF PAINT

We are agents for this paint. For stacks, roofs and all kinds of iron work it has no equal for durability. Mr. Baillie, the inventor of it, will be in the city for the next two weeks, and will take contracts for painting roofs and stacks and guarantee the work. TO THE BUSINESS MEN OF AMERICA

The time has arrived for every business man to consider the fact that in many sections of the country the people are running amuck and that the life of the Republic is at stake.

Not only is our Republic in danger from loss of personal liberty and financial strength but the sanity of the people is threatened. Many of you are contributing to the prohibition movement and I am going to tell you what you may expect if the prohibition movement is not checked.

You will see the destruction of three billion three hundred million dollars worth of property invested in the liquor business and collateral trades.

You will see more than one million men and women thrown out of employment.

You will see thousands of firms go to the wall and you will see a nation panic stricken and on the verge of starvation.

You will see the people, excited even now to the point of assailing a woman who opposes prohibition as in North Carolina, grow more desperate and unreasonable.

You will see your legislative halls filled with fanatics and demagogues at a time when the wise leadership of the statesman might save the country.

You will see as now the efforts of the press of the country to restore confidence being offset by the efforts of destructionists.

You will see your liberty encroached upon and your home ransacked by "Search and Seizure" bands.

You will see law defied and treated with contempt. If it were impossible to regulate the liquor traffic there might be some reason for trying to abolish it. I say "trying to abolish it," because by passing laws you would only be "trying." You cannot actually abolish the liquor business so long as the great majority of the people want to drink and are willing to pay for alcoholic beverages. Already the prohibition movement has destroyed the property of the liquor trade amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, without compensation, in one-half of this country geographically, and in this vast territory the revenues to the states, counties and cities have been wiped out, but the

Cried the critical Gump: "On my word, These astronomers are so absurd! In this book on the stars They tell all about Mars. But of Pa's they don't seem to have heard!"

by the gallon or case instead of by the glass as, under a license system, I urge that you think of the enormous waste in connection with the prohibition campaign.

You will admit that the campaign is costing the backers of the movement as much as a national Democratic or Republican campaign would cost and you must recognize the fact that this expense is constant and growing.

You know that the money spent in attacking the business must call for money to be spent in its defense and that there should be no such expenditure by either side. The liquor business can be regulated but it must be taken out of politics. Model License law will bring about the needed enforcement of fair law and under Model License law you will have no cause to complain of the liquor business because it will be conducted in accordance with law and the law will represent the wishes of the people. When you have such a law the destructionists will be treated with contempt.

That Delicious Maple Flavor

We cook Mapl-Flake in pure Maple syrup, mainly for the children's sake. We make the one perfect food—the one food that's all food. So we make it taste best, too.

You don't know what you miss—you who lack Mapl-Flake.

No other flaked food is even half so delicious. That's because of our Maple flavor. No other flaked food is half so digestible. That's because of our process of 96 hours. Please try it and see.

We add the Maple syrup to make the food enticing. We confess that.

But the enticement is good for you, and good for your children.

It leads them to prefer the food that is best for them.

The one wheat food which is made wholly digestible.

Wheat, in the first place, is the premier food of the world. It has been for ages.

We make Mapl-Flake of the finest wheat that is grown.

We steam-cook it for six hours—cook it in pure Maple syrup.

Then we cure it for days, in a way that partly digests it.

Then each separate berry is flaked so thin that the full heat of our ovens can reach every atom.

Then we bake those flakes at 400 degrees.

Flaked food can be made in one-fourth of that time. And to shorten the process lessens the cost, of course.

But the result will be food less than half as digestible.

The cost of serving—the cost of cream—is the same as for Mapl-Flake. The food value is half.

The balance ferments, instead of digesting, and leads to digestive disorders.

Wheat, to be digestible, must be made soluble.

The particles must be separated so the digestive juices can get to them.

That requires long cooking, long curing, and a fierce baking heat.

It requires full 96 hours.

Please try such a food and learn what it means to you.

You'll never again be content with the common foods.

One 15c Package Free

We would far rather buy the first package ourselves than to have you go without knowing it.

So, if you wish, please send us this coupon, and we will send you an order—good at your grocer's—for a 15c package free.

Please let Mapl-Flake—for your own sake—tell you how good it is. Then ask the children what food they'll have next.

BANQUET

Will be Tended by Successful Candidates to Losers at Recent Democratic Primaries.

A local political event will be pulled off in this city on Thursday evening, June 18, that is decidedly a new innovation. The affair will be a banquet given by the winning candidates on the Democratic primary election ticket to the losers who failed of nomination. The place will be at "Uncle Joe" Kuster's famous restaurant, and the time will be 8 o'clock p. m. The hosts and guests and the candidates for nomination at the late Democratic primary election, to the number of about 50 will be present. In addition to this the editors of the Advocate, German Express, Johnstown Independent and Granville Times will be guests of the occasion.

Phil B. Smythe will represent the winners as an orator or speaker, and Hon. B. F. McDonald will represent the losers.

Senator W. E. Miller will act as toastmaster.

The committee on music consists of J. Howard Jones and Robbins Hunter. The general committee of arrangements consists of Hon. R. W. Howard, J. M. Farmer and E. M. Larson.

PICKPOCKET

Robt. John Anderson, of 85 Sunday Morning—is Arrested and Bound Over to Grand Jury.

The first pickpocket to operate in Newark for several months was arrested by the police Sunday morning and today he was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $300 by Mayor Atherton.

John Anderson made the acquaintance in the Krupp restaurant of Harry King, 31 years old, a bill poster. King saw Anderson was "flush," while he was on his uppers, and he tried to borrow a little money for a few days. Anderson couldn't see things that way and King was refused, gently but firmly. He followed Anderson and when on South Second street they had a little scuffle. During the mixup King got his hand in Anderson's pocket and touched him for $5.

The police were promptly notified and it didn't take officers Carroll, Culhan and Moore long to locate the "dip." He was locked up and this morning was bound over.

It is estimated by mining experts at Johannesburg that the amount of gold still to be mined along the Rand Reef is to be valued at $5,000,000,000.

PICNIC

Of School Children at Idlewild Park Saturday Was a Pronounced Success.

A big and enjoyable event was the picking county school children's picnic at Idlewild park Saturday. The children arrived early in the day with well filled baskets and the original plan of the management, that everything on the grounds should be from the noon hour to the remainder of the afternoon worked satisfactorily. Large tubs of lemonade, scattered at different places about the grounds, and watched over by a caterer, supplied the youngsters with plenty to quench their thirst.

The athletic events, which were in charge of Matt Smith, formed the most popular part of the day's program and prizes were distributed as follows:

Catherine Madigan, a fine doll donated by Manager Hayes; a picture donated by Ed Doe, and a fine jewel case donated by Fuchs Bros.

Harry Chenoweth, box of fishing tackle, by Newark Hardware Co.

Thos. Chapman, boy's knife, by J. C. Jones Hardware Co.

George Bonner, ball glove, by Rutledge Bros.

T. Jefferson, mouth harp, by Rawlings' music store.

Leslie Summers, a knife, by Dan L. Jones Hardware Co.

Eva Snelling, a doll head, by Manager Hayes.

E. Cunningham, child's knife, fork and spoon, by Chas. Schaus.

Grace Marvin, a law, by Manager Hayes.

Ollie Hagney, 100 feet of fishing line, by Newark Hardware Co.

Gertrude Madigan, child's knife, fork and spoon, by Charles Schaus.

A. C. Cramer, ball bat, by Norton.

"of course."

Rose Clouse, three boxes of candy, Hayes & Co.

The merry-go-round, skating rink and in fact, every attraction on the park grounds, were packed to overflowing all day. No accident occurred on the grounds to spoil the day's enjoyment for the little folks, and as evening came on the returned to their homes, a tired, but happy lot, extending their thanks to Manager Hayes for his royal entertainment.

GOOD RECORD

Johnstown Postmaster, Recently Confirmed by the Senate, Has Served Twelve Years.

Postmaster Blamer has had his re-appointment confirmed by the Senate, and since that time our postmaster has been wearing a Sunny Jim smile. Postmaster Blamer succeeded M. Ashbrook as postmaster at Johnstown in August, 1896, and has already served about 12 years, and with four years more to his credit will certainly have a good record for length of service. He has made a good postmaster, and his friends who are to go on are congratulating him upon his latest performance. The Johnstown postoffice under his administration has grown in importance, now having five rural carriers and carries with it a salary of $1200, together with all allowances for rent, fuel, clerk hire, etc.

Postmaster Blamer has always been a most courteous and obliging official, a clever citizen and politician, and well deserves the honors so generously bestowed upon him. Therefore the independent join with his friends in hearty congratulations—Johnstown, Independent.
